

Pablo Brooks – Pleaser EP

press quotes (EP and singles)

Pablo Brooks from Düsseldorf, Germany played over 50 shows in the past two years with his band, most of them sold out, headlining shows all over Germany, as well as Amsterdam and Antwerp and even a first headline show in London. While his fans are lining up for his shows every night, the press and business are mostly oblivious of the young artist.

„Pleaser“ is his second EP, which is about the feeling of losing yourself as a 20-year old in a major city, like Berlin, where Pablo is based at the moment. Feeling so lost, that you're secretly wishing for someone to find you. It's about relationships to lovers and friends, but more importantly the ever-so-confusing relationship with yourself as a young adult. How one experiences love and lust, desire and pleasure, anger and bitterness and self-sabotage and how these emotions change in the context of the agonising coming-of-age process.

„The heartfelt pop ballad „Boy don't cry“ is an explosive emotional track that explores the effects of toxicity and toxic masculinity within relationships, Inspired by his own experience where his former partner continuously gaslighted him in different ways, Pablo uses his pain to pen a heartwarming and relatable love tale that listeners can easily relate to.“

Wonderland Magazine:

„With a powerful bass and hard-hitting, introspective lyrics, this energetic track "Boy don't cry" will have fans on their feet in no time.“

Pop Passion Music Blog

<https://www.poppassionblog.com/post/review-boy-don-t-cry-pablo-brooks>

„The latest single from Pablo Brooks, "Boy Don't Cry," delivers a pertinently pointed statement through ear-worm melody and alt-pop grit. A subtle-yet-groovy bassline slithers through the verses, like a lit fuse, leading into an explosively catchy chorus. The guitar-driven pulse of the track makes the most out of contrast and impact, landing knock-out blows with each bar. Brooks' vocals are solid-bodied and slick, sliding over notes with hints of spite and abandon. He spits the titular phrase with both a sarcastic smirk and bitter frustration.“

B-Sides and Badlands:

„Pablo Brooks' "Boy Don't Cry" has a well worked video that mimics the last dinner from Christian mythology, at times, but also shows creative introspection as a way out of sadness. The song shows a tumultuous connection with someone else, filled with heartache and confusion. Delving into the complexities of love, desire, and regret, highlighting the raw emotions and internal struggles that arise within a turbulent relationship“

"Boy Don't Cry" é uma canção com tanto e Pop como de electrónica, muito emocional e intensa, sempre tendo a voz como personagem principal, e, acima de tudo, muito sofisticada e intensa, que se me colou à pele desde que a ouvi pela primeira vez. Ponham o som alto e carreguem no play, por favor.“

„Mit einer beinahe unverschämten Lässigkeit haut er auf „Pleaser“ Songs raus, die mal an die Coolness der Scissor Sisters oder die großen Gesten eines George Michael erinnern ("Boy, Don't Cry"), mal schnurstracks auf den Dancefloor ziehen ("Rush", "Master"), in den Pop-Charts eine gute Figur machen ("Perfume") oder jedem melancholischen Indie-Singer-Songwriter zu Ehre gereichen würden ("Pleasure Song"). Noch ein Geheimtipp, deuten (oft ausverkaufte) umjubelte Konzerte in Wien, Berlin, Amsterdam oder London schon an, wohin der weitere Weg für Pablo Brooks gehen könnte.“
