

ALICE MERTON

TOUR ANNOUNCEMENT 2025

Alice Merton has undeniably become known as the girl with no roots. Born in Germany and raised in Canada and England, Alice's songs always talked about celebrating life as a nomad, and making a home wherever you want it to be. Since her debut "No Roots", which came out in 2016, the last couple of years could fill an entire career: A billion streams, Top 10 charts across Europe, playing Coachella, 8x Platinum, US-Gold, and the release of two studio albums MINT and S.I.D.E.S. All done independent, everything homemade!

Alice's latest chapter began in 2024 with the release of Heron. In this EP her thoughts turn inwards, and instead of finding a home in the outside world, she went on an internal journey of feeling lost on the inside and asking the question of all questions: who am I supposed to be, and how well do you know yourself at all?

It questions one's own happiness, in a world where we are constantly influenced by other people's opinions on what happiness is for them, especially through social media. It's become almost impossible to filter out the noise and truly ask ourselves "What is it that we really want out of this life, and how well do we actually know ourselves at all? Can we independently find happiness without being bombarded by everyone else's definition of what they think happiness is?"

All these questions are part of Heron, a name Alice decided on after landing yet again in a new city, and observing these elegant birds in the middle of London-Barbican, an unusual place you would think for such a bird, grazing away at midnight.

And now, Alice Merton is entering an exciting new chapter. After an US headline tour and a summer filled with major European festivals in 2024, she's heading back on the road this summer and fall — with a return to cities and countries she hasn't played in for years.

The tour kicks off in Canada this September, including long-awaited shows in Toronto, Montreal and Québec City, before continuing through Europe in October and November — with stops in Munich, Berlin, Prague, Milan, Paris and more.

This new run of shows promises not only a journey through all of Alice's fan favourites from No Roots to Heron, but also new music. Alice is ready to share the next evolution of her sound and story with audiences around the world.